SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 24, 1872.

A Frantic Appeal.

At last the Democratic politicians of this State who have accepted the Greeley bargain are forced to take notice of the Louisville Convention. They would have preferred greatly to pass it by as a movement not worth attention, but it is growing to such formidable proportions that they think it no longer prudent to ignore it. Our present Congressman, Hon. J. H. Slater, comes forward with an earnest appeal to the Democracy to follow the Greeley flag. He observes with deep regret the disposition of his brethren to straggle, and as a shepherd of Democracy thinks it high time to issue a proclamation of warning. Why a Congressman should be a blackguard does not appear to the common mind; but doubtless Mr. Slater thinks his style of appeal better suited to arrest the attention of the "slums" and "lewd fellows of the baser sort," who (Mr. Greeley says) constitute the chief strength of the Democratic party. Therefore Mr. Slater calls President Grant a "corruptionist," "nepotist" and "gift-taker," with plenty of other epithets drawn from a well stored magazine of vituperation, and thinks no Democrat ought to have any hesitation about voting for the entirely great and truly good Horace as against Grant. Our Congressman finds that President Grant "has for three years sought by all the vast powers of his exalted station to make the military superior to the civil power of the Republic." If this be so he has met with very poor success. But Mr. Slater cannot believe it, however great his credulity. His expressions are simply stock phrases long used by his party, and here again pressed into service by him as padding for his skeleton of an argument. Most people are of easy and generous disposition; they make allowance for the rhetorical exaggerations of politicians, and even [illegible] ate the political necessities and [illegible] which force Democratic orators to run their rant into the realm of burlesque. [illegible] are not wanting in sympathy for those who, lacking matter on which to make a just arraignment of their opponents, are driven to such expedients as Mr. Slater has here resorted to. Therefore, though they don't believe a word of his cant and rant about the subversion of the civil by the military power, their easy good nature makes them quite tolerant, even when such gentlemen as orator Slater insist on boring them with it.

Continuing his bill of particulars, Mr. Slater discovers that President Grant has obtained villainous legislation from "a servile and truculent (sic) Congress, for no other purpose than to possess the power to silence the voice of the opposition in the prison-cell, and re-elect himself to the Presidency by the power of the bayonet." This picture is drawn with much warmth of coloring. It is "red with uncommon wrath." But let us gain the ear of our member while we whisper to him that this legislation which he so much condemns was provided at the suggestion of the great and good Horace Greeley, who demanded it as a means of checking frauds by the Tammany people and preventing the Southern Democracy of the Ku Klux order from terrorizing the Republican voters of the Southern States. After the law had been tried the present Democratic candidate for the Presidency was delighted with it, and had only to regret that it could not be made to apply to State and municipal as well as Congressional elections. Doubtless it is unfortunate for the Democracy that the law enables the President to "silence the voice of (Ku Klux) opposition in the prison-cell;" but it is comforting to know that the prison-cell can be avoided by abstaining from outrage and violence.

Mr. Slater thinks that the best way to get rid of these laws is to support the man who first suggested them, and who warmly approved them after their enactment. He does not realize that the people see clear through the hollowness of this pretense. They know that the whole movement for which Mr. Slater pleads is unworthy and insincere. It is chiefly this that gives the Louisville Convention the power and force which now alarm such politicians as the member from Oregon. From all appearances the great mass of the party will be represented at Louisville and will accept the candidates nominated there. The movement grows, and Mr. Slater's letter is simply one more abortive attempt to conjure it down.

A prominent Eastern Democrat who does not follow Greeley but looks to Louisville, illustrates his position and that of others by a story. He says that when he was a boy it was the annual custom of the Indians to visit his native town, and they invariably celebrated the occasion by getting drunk. But they always left some sober ones behind to take care of the canoes. So in this instance, the Democratic party having gone on a fearful and wonderful spree, himself and a few more have been left behind to take care of the canoe, which he hopes will prove useful again after the craze is over.

In his letter published in the Herald Hon. James H. Slater, M. C., entreats Democrats to stand by that eminent and veteran Democrat, Horace Greeley, and to discountenance, deprecate, discourage, rebuke and frown upon every person who intimates that Horace is not the best Democrat in the United States, and the only man who should now be thought of for a leader. Our member of Congress is sick in consequence of the Louisville Convention, and the Herald is also unhappy about it.

Mr. Slater, in speaking of President Grant, says he "has asked for, and a servile and truculent Congress has granted him, 'dangerous powers.'" It is evident that our Congressman's mind is not very clear when he uses the word "truculent," as above. He evidently thinks that "truculent" and "truckling" mean the same thing. He blunders as much in the substance of his accusation against the President and Congress as he does in the use of language when he tries to talk about it.

Now you know how it is yourselves. A short time ago Democratic organs were twitting Republicans about their concern for the "side show" that set up in business in Cincinnati. Now, our Democratic brethren have a "side show" affliction on their side. Their organs are all vehemently denouncing the "side show" business and talking angrily about Louisville.

Returns from the West Virginia election are meagre, but indications are unfavorable for Democrats. They seem to be beaten in Ohio county (Wheeling), where they have heretofore had large majorities.

In another place we print a reply to Mr. Charles Sumner by Mr. Frederick Douglass. The triumph of the colored man's argument over that of the pompous white Senator is complete.

The attempt to organize a Greeley and Brown Club at Hillsboro was a total failure, not a single person putting in an appearance.

The agricultural works at Salem are making progress. A large lot of machinery for these works, costing $10,000, has just arrived.

The "Oregon City Hack and Dray Company" has been incorporated. J. M. Frazer, C. M. Greenman and E. B. Collard are principals.

The penitentiary at Salem had a narrow escape from a conflagration on Wednesday night. A chandelier containing four large lamps filled with coal oil fell, and the flames instantly filled the building. Prisoners smothered the flames with their blankets.

From the Statesman: Mr. Chadwick, State Secretary, has the list of selected swamp lands made out, and ready to send on to the Surveyor General at Washington. Maps, field notes, etc., will be sent on with the list, that there may be no difficulty in comparing the State records with those furnished by the Government Surveyors. The list comprises over 200,000 acres.

THE TERRITORIES.

The Washington Territory penitentiary contains eleven prisoners.

Fires at Puget Sound are destroying an immense amount of timber this year.

Dr. Lindsley, of Portland, delivered an able lecture at Olympia on the electro magnetic telegraph, a few evenings since.

The Port Townsend Argus thinks that the present would be a good time for Bierstadt, the painter, to visit Puget Sound to study the magnificent scenery. It is so smoky that he would be able to see but one thing at a time, and could thus concentrate his energies.

There was a rumor current at Steilacoom, a few days ago, to the effect that the final terminus of the Northern Pacific railroad would soon be located in the vicinity of Tacoma, and that there was considerable excitement in the latter place among real estate holders in consequence.

Let all Republicans remember the call for a meeting at the Court House to-night to organize a Grant and Wilson club. Organization is all-important. Let us have a good attendance to-night.

An Appeal to Colored Voters.

BY FREDERICK DOUGLASS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Aug. 9, 1872.

Colored Fellow-Citizens: In view of the insidious and dangerous advice and counsel of Mr. Sumner, I think it is my duty to set forth a few urgent reasons why we, as a race and as fellow-citizens, all bound up in the same interest, cannot and should not vote for Greeley and Brown; but that to a man, we should cast our whole weight into the scale for Grant and Wilson.

First—We in the South have been liberated from slavery by the direct agency of the Republican party. Had Greeley been President instead of Lincoln, we would to-day have been in a worse bondage under the Slave Republic of the Southern Confederate States than ever before. Greeley advocated this policy and did his best to establish the Republic of which slavery was to be the chief corner-stone.

Second—Our first vote was cast as freedmen for Grant in 1868. Have we been disappointed in the result of his Administration? Previous to that period you had no vote. Now we have equal rights (or almost equal rights) with the white race. We can accumulate property as they do; we have the law's protection over us as they have; our marital relations are respected; our wives and children are our own and not the property of others; we can testify in every Court; we have the right if we have the power to have our brethren elected to the Senate and Congress of the country; we are a power that is felt; we hold the balance of power in America; no corrupt or vacillating man can be elected to the Presidential chair unless we consent to vote for him.

Third—All this has occurred since '65, and chiefly since we cast our vote for Grant in '68. Are we prepared to risk the abandonment of these great privileges and blessings, and vote for a man who believes that any State may dissolve from the Union when she sees fit, or pass such laws as may seem to her best? Are we prepared to vote for the nominees of the Democratic party, whose hearts never have changed toward us, who kept us in slavery as long as they had the power, and who if they had the power again would (to say the least of it) do their very utmost to restrict our liberties and oppress us as of old. Mr. Sumner may deceive himself; he cannot deceive us; or, to use the language of the gentleman, Mr. James R. Doolittle, Chairman of the Convention which nominated Mr. Greeley, one of the objects of the nomination being the "overthrow of negro supremacy," And forsooth, what is this supremacy they so much wish to overthrow? It is simply the cancellation of those ordinary privileges and blessings, enumerated in clause second. We have no supremacy, and never expect to have, nor intend to try for.

Fourth—In conclusion: Be not deceived! With Grant, our security is unquestionable; our happiness will be made lasting. With Greeley, we would enter upon a sea of trouble—an unknown and anxious future. Unscrupulous advisers would be his friends. Our old foes would surround him, as they even do now, and even if a few stanch friends should endeavor to stem the coming troubles, they would be swept away with the torrent, and the great work of the Republican party prove an abortion. It cannot be that we will send one vote out of our entire midst to help bring about such dire results, and I pray God that, when the time comes, every man of our race will be found true to the cause of human rights to all. FRED'K DOUGLASS.

DEPARTURE FOR CHINA.

FOREST GROVE, Oregon, Aug. 22, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

SIR: Please allow me space in your columns for a short communication. The subject just now occupying our minds is the departure of Rev. J. E. Walker, Oregon's first Missionary for the field of labor in China. Four years ago, having completed his course and graduated from the Pacific University, (situated in this place) he left his home to pursue his theological studies in an institution in the East. After graduating there and preaching for a time, he returned home in April last; but only for a brief period. During his absence he had offered his services to the Foreign Mission and been accepted. As he designed sailing for China in September, he had little time in which to visit the haunts of his youth in his native State, his very many friends, and above all his dear old homestead and the loved ones there. On the 19th of June he was ordained in the Congregational Church here, quite a delegation of ministers being present, several of whom participated in the ordination services. The occasion was one of deep interest and the church was filled to its utmost capacity. Since then he has flitted about, visiting and preaching here and there until the time of his sojourn among us has expired, and to-day he must leave us again—perhaps forever. A week ago last Sabbath morning, and again last Sabbath evening, he preached here in the church of which he has been for years an active member. His addresses on these occasions were earnest imploring appeals for a life of devotion to Christ's cause. Pleading, forcible, and full of Christian zeal, these discourses can never be forgotten by those who listened to them. Wednesday evening being the last of his stay, a farewell meeting was held in the Congregational Church at 8 o'clock. Quite a number were present. Rev. E. Walker opened the meeting by an address in which he portrayed with deep feeling the glory and majesty of the cause in which his son was now being sent out as an embassador, the security from danger; being armed with the promise of the Gospel of Christ, the great embassador: "Lo, I am with you always," etc.; the gracious assurance of abundant reward: "A hundred fold in this life and in that which is to come life everlasting." What stronger argument could be brought to bear on the subject than the sight of that hoary-headed man of God whose life had been spent in mission labor, standing there and cheerfully, and even joyfully devoting his son to the same arduous work and fearlessly bidding him God speed.

The son responded with a short, stirring, hopeful and tender address.

Professor J. Marsh next spoke of the importance of Foreign Missions and the indications that the "Son of Righteousness" was already arising in many of those hitherto benighted lands. He then, in behalf of the University, assured the young Missionary of the deep heartfelt interest which the Faculty entertained for his welfare and tendered him the best wishes both of the Institution and Church, and assured him of their earnest desire to assist him in his work.

Rev. H. Lyman followed with a farewell address. He had been our dear brother's teacher for many years and he was glad to see him devoting himself to such a noble work. Twenty-four years ago he had bidden his friends farewell to become a Missionary on this coast, and he had never regretted doing so. He did not think the young brother would ever regret it, and he joyfully, almost proudly, bade him God speed. He earnestly exhorted him to faith, simple trust, earnest devotion, and Christian-like humility, and commended him to the all-protecting care of his glorious master.

The services, which had been interspersed with hymns breathing a missionary spirit, now closed with one and the benediction, after which the meeting became social, and many were the congratulations, expressions of sympathy and kindly leave-takings. Everybody seemed to enjoy the meeting and went away happier and (let us hope) better for it.

In leaving us to-day our brother takes with him the kindest regards of a host of friends, and many an earnest prayer will ascend to the throne of grace in his behalf during his absence. May abundant success attend his labors and very many souls be given him for his hire. A.

YOUR OLD AND TRIED LEADER!

In the momentous vital struggle with that same foe, though now under an usurped and assumed name, calls upon you once more. Arise, then, in your might and power with the imperishable victories of many well fought and won battles inscribed on your banners of Peace, Justice and Liberty, and strike the skulking foe the blow of Death.

Old Multnomah will stand by her record—the Banner County of this State in the cause of Republicanism—and with the names of Grant and Wilson inscribed on her Colors, march forward to victory in November, pledging her devotion to the nation's Hero (in war or peace), and thus assist in securing that peace, repose and prosperity which the people now enjoy under his administration. Forward then, to duty—Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty—and that every outlook may be well guarded and an organization made, a meeting will be held at the

Saturday Even'g, August 24, 1872,

To which all Republicans are invited.

Eminent Speakers Will Address You!

The Campaign will thus begin in Multnomah county, and the sun of November 5th will go down on the last battle field in the struggle, halo with a victory unequaled in the political history of this nation, won by and on behalf of the friends of justice law and order—Grant and Wilson.

Let every Republican in this county and every true friend of liberty and justice who desire to see those principles perpetuated in this land and who thereby favor the election of Grant and Wilson attend the meeting on August 24th.

Chairman County Central Committee.

CITY.

GRAIN FROM SILETZ.—Several samples of grain have been laid on our table by a gentleman who has just arrived from Siletz. The grain was raised on the lands adjacent and belonging to the Indian Reservation. The varieties consist of common white or fall wheat, club wheat and a bunch of the ordinary side oats. In the length of the stalks, head and character of the grain these samples are equal to, if not superior to any similar varieties we have seen this present year. The white wheat was sown last November and the club wheat and oats last March. The grain was raised from a very black rich loam and has certainly yielded a handsome return for the labor expended, considering the locality—its proximity to the sea. The impression is gained by many that cereals cannot be raised with success at Siletz or any point similarly situated. These specimens certainly ought to dispel such an impression. The soil contiguous to the Reservation is as fertile as any which can be found elsewhere in the State, and no difficulty is experienced in raising crops. The only drawback is the heavy rains which fall periodically during the summer season and the constant fogs and damp atmosphere prevailing in that locality. This renders the maturity of the grain a little more uncertain than in localities more remote from the ocean, and the security of the crop from rain storms a difficult undertaking to accomplish at times.

OYSTERVILLE PLEASURING.—A gentleman just from this popular resort for pleasure seekers, informs us that a great number of ladies and gentlemen from this city are now sojourning there. Oysterville has two baths, both of which are crowded to repletion with Portlanders. He is under the impression that there is no better place on the coast to visit for real enjoyment. There are opportunities and facilities for more diversified amusements than can be found at other places. Forty two sail boats, including several sloops, can be found at Oysterville, any of which are at the ready disposal of those desiring to indulge in a pleasant sail, and there is a fine, secure bay in which to exercise one's knowledge of nautical affairs. Twenty two miles of smooth beach can be found along the coast on which to ride either horseback or in a carriage. The crowds who are pleasuring at that place are enjoying a season of fashionable recreation—dividing the time between oystering, bathing and holding picnics. For the latter class of amusement there can be found very pleasant grounds on any of the numerous little isles which stud the bay.

PASSENGERS.—The steamer Ajax which sailed yesterday evening for San Francisco, carried away the following passengers: Mrs J C Hildreth, W G Sibs, J Elum, Dr W H Taylor, J Coboren, J Pray and wife, Mrs C Levy, H Abrams, E Gal..., D Simon, Frank Taylor, Mrs Honora O'Neil, R E Walker, E S Scranton, Miss Susan Smith, H Harker, Mrs Jones, Eugene Lafaures, Miss M... and brother, M S Burrell, L Barnum, M Jas, E C Molers, Mrs Phillips, F L Felstine, W Curtiss and wife, P Selling, F R Strong, A D McDonald, Mrs C C Way and two children, C W Murphy, wife and three children, James Brent, D Murphy, wife and two children, W, F & Co's messenger, and 20 in the steerage.

EXAMINING THE COUNTRY.—We learn that Mr Thean, Superintendent of the Oregon and California Railroad and Prof Collier, of the Forest Grove University, are now out in the Klamath Lake country. These gentlemen left here about two weeks ago, proceeded to Jacksonville, and from thence across to Klamath. The principal object of the visit is to examine the character of the country with a view of making surveys for a railroad. The party are coming through to the valley by what is known as the "Pengra route," and making the necessary observations so as to enable them to select the most feasible route for a railroad.

NEW MARKET.—The asphaltum floor to Ankeny's new market is nearly completed. A number of carpenters are engaged in putting up the counters which are to separate the stalls from the main hall extending through the center of the building. The counters are made of wood strongly braced, and covered with marble slabs. The posts which support the upper stories are connected by a series of arch work, and are very neatly [illegible] and stained. Within three weeks at the [illegible] the market will be ready for occupants.

AN ERROR.—A correspondent of the Advocate states that the notice which has appeared in both our contemporaries that the State Association of Spiritualists will hold a camp meeting in September, at the old camp grounds in Powell's Valley, commencing on the 12th of that month, and intended for several days or a week, is a [illegible]. The camp grounds in Powell's Valley are the property of the M. E Church, and no application has ever been made for the use of the grounds for the above named purposes.

MAKING THE VOYAGE.—The Norwegian bark Electra, Captain Bronlund, which arrived at this port from Newport, Wales, made the voyage in 150 days from port to port. The Electra is a new vessel, and is not yet a year from the ways. She was built at Laurweg, Norway, in 1872, and is of 581 tons register. This is the second voyage she has made. The bark Navigator, Captain Samsensen, from Middlesborough made the passage in 170 days. She was built in 1871 at Stavanger, Norway and is 520 tons register.

RECOVERED.—From General Palmer we learn that the condition of Mrs Palmer, who it will be recollected was reported some weeks ago to be in a dying condition at Siletz, is greatly improved, so that her recovery is now beyond all doubt. She is able to be up again. The numerous friends of Mrs Palmer will be gratified to learn of the convalescence of that very estimable lady and of her unexpected restoration to the bosom of her family.

SAWED OFF.—A young man employed at a saw mill at Cementville met with a severe accident on Monday last. When in the act of carrying a large plank away from the carriage the weight overbalanced him, and in his efforts to gain his equilibrium he placed his foot within reach of the circular saw. As a natural consequence his foot was nearly severed. He was brought over on Tuesday to Astoria and the necessary medical attendance procured.

CONFERENCE SESSION.—The large and commodious chapel of the Willamet University at Salem, has been announced as the place where the the M. E Annual Conference will hold its next session, commencing on Thursday 29th inst. The lecture rooms adjoining the University chapel will afford unusual accommodations for the meetings of standing committees and other conference [illegible].

COMMENCED.—Work has been commenced on the steamer Annie Stewart, which is moored at the foot of Salmon street. Besides the addition of a new boiler, many alterations and improvements will be made to the cabin, passenger accommodations, etc. This steamer will probably be made to take the line by the first of October.

REPAIRING.—The bark Edward James, discharging cargo at Moffatt & Stephens' wharf, is undergoing some repairs. The forward part of the vessel is being renovated, the flooring torn up, new cross braces placed in, and some necessary repairs made to the capstan and windlass for drawing up the anchor.

MELONS.—Messrs F A Bean & Co, has laid on our table two fine, large and deliciously flavored watermelons, raised in the vicinity of the Dalles, for which they will accept the obligations of this establishment. They informs us that they have just received a supply of cantelopes, peaches and tomatoes.

IN THE STREAM.—The bark Navigator arrived from down the river yesterday morning in tow of the tug Merrimac and is now anchored out in the stream, opposite the Boneyard. The bark Electra is moored at the west side wharf near the depot. Both are laden with railroad iron.

LIVELY.—The appearance of Fourth street at its intersection with Market is very lively now. A large force of graders are at work with carts and teams. A marked change in the appearance of that portion of the street is already discernible.

W, F & Co's AGENT.—Mr S D Pope, long connected with the P T Co, has recently been appointed agent for Wells Fargo & Co at Oregon City.

APPOINTED.—Theodore Wygant and W F Trimble, both of this city, have been appointed Notaries Public by Governor Grover.

WITH WHEAT.—The two vessels Electra and Navigator will most probably load with wheat at this port for Liverpool.

THE MAIL ROBBERY.

FIFTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The court convened at 10 o'clock A M. Parties present as before. U S District Attorney Gibbs stated that the additional witnesses which the prosecution had intended to introduce had not arrived in the city, and that the prosecution rested.

THE DEFENSE.

Counsel for the defendants offered to introduce Mary J Tompkins as a witness to prove the whereabouts of Hanson, White and Bramlette on the day of and the night following the commission of the robbery.

Counsel for the United States objected because the witness was the wife of Tompkins, a co-defendant jointly on trial. After argument by counsel for and against the proposition the objection was sustained by the court and the witness was excluded from testifying.

Defendant's counsel then stated that the motion they had proposed to make upon deliberation they had concluded not to make.

Ad Edgar was called on part of defendants and testified: On the 12th of July last I was driving stage between Burnt Ranch and Ward's and was stopped in Antelope Canyon by three men and the mail taken from me. When I first saw the men they were coming out of the brush a short distance ahead of the stage and were not more than three feet apart. When I first saw them I was surprised, of course, and said Oh, or Hello. One of the men ordered us to throw up our hands and to throw out the mail. Capt Fearing threw out the way sack and the man asked if that was all, and I said there was another sack, and Captain Fearing threw it out. The robber then crossed over to the near side of the team. As he came down by the wagon he said, "Edgar you needn't be alarmed, you ain't going to be hurt." He also told the women that they were not going to be hurt. When he came near the wagon he took hold of one of the sacks with his right hand, and held the gun which he had carried levelled at me in his left, having hold of it above the hammer. There was a small canvas sack under my feet which he saw and asked me what was in it. I told him it was mine and had some clothes in it. There was also a leather express sack in the wagon, and he asked me if that wasn't a mail sack, and I told him it was not. He asked what was in it, and I told him some books and papers of mine. He took the sack out, unbuckled it and took out a bundle of papers, looked at them and said "You are correct," and buckled it up again and threw it into the wagon. I asked him if that was all he wanted, he said it was, I asked him if I could go on and he said I could. The other two men were all the time standing in the same position they had first taken, with their guns levelled on us. Only the one passed round to the left of the wagon. There were on the stage at the time Captain Fearing, a Mrs Morrison and Miss Franklin. Two other men and a boy were out walking at that time. Miss Franklin sat on a seat directly behind me, on a seat about a foot lower than the one on which I sat. When the stage stopped she had her arms around my waist and her head and face against my back. Just as the stage stopped Mrs Morrison jumped out and went behind the wagon. My impression at first at the time was that it was the middle and tallest man who told us to throw up our hands, but after that the other man did all the talking. The first man, the one who did the talking, was a short, heavy set man with a plump, well formed hand. He was about five feet six inches high, I should judge. I could not judge as to his weight under the circumstances. He had on thick, heavy solid boots, heavier than are usually worn, judging from the soles they were very coarse boots. The second man, or the one who stood in the middle when I first saw them, was a tall and slim man and stood unusually straight, not less than five feet ten inches, and may have been taller—he was quite a tall man. The third man was larger and heavier than either of the other two, but shorter than the second. I would think he was about five feet eight inches high. He was standing on lower ground than the others. The men were all masked with dark colored or brown masks with only two holes cut for the eyes. The masks hung to the middle of the waists in front. I have known the defendant Bramlette for several years and have seen him quite often during that time, and I would not judge that he was one of the robbers. I have known defendant Tompkins since 1863, and have seen him very often when he was living on the road. Don't know how long he lived on the road. His house was a stage station and stopping place. I have heard him talk a great many times. I did not recognize the voice of the robber as the voice of Tompkins. I am satisfied Tompkins was not the man who did the talking. The man was of a different build, had a different voice, form and walk. Tompkins is a taller man than the man who came to the wagon. I examined Tompkins' hand eight days after the robbery and saw no marks on his hand like that on the hand of the man who came to the wagon at the robbery. I am but little acquainted with Hanson. The first time I saw him this year was when he came to the mouth of Muddy to get a saw that had been sent up on the stage from Tompkins. I have not noticed him particularly. Miss Franklin was crying while the stage was stopped, and remained in the same position. Miss Morrison got out of the stage before the mail bags were thrown out. I think I saw the eyes of the man who came to the wagon, but I cannot describe their color. I do not remember of hearing the robber say anything further than I have related. We came on to Ward's which was the stopping place for the stage that night. I tried to get some horses, but could not and went back afoot. We got to Ward's about eight o'clock that evening. Knisely and I went back to the scene of the robbery, and from there to Moppin's, and staid at Moppin's from 12 o'clock until 3 in the morning. I told Mr Moppin that I wanted assistance. He told me to wait in the morning and he would get up his horses. I got no assistance. That morning we went back to the place of the robbery and out on the hill and found some signs, but being in a hurry to get to town we searched but two or three hours. We went out on the hill looking for the mail sacks but found no trace of them. I commenced carrying the mail on that route about four years ago but had traveled the route two years before with Wells, Fargo & Co's express. Of the robbers the one who came to the wagon had a double barreled shot gun and a white handled six shooter, the others had what I took to be Henry rifles.

Cross examined.—From the place of the robbery we went out on the hill a mile, but we did not hunt on the ridge for tracks. I did go up the ravine to the right of the road and searched. Up there I was alone, Mr Knisely being on the other side. I saw one track in the gulch. It is down grade from the place of the robbery to Ward's. I did not see T M Ward at Moppin's that night. I told Mr Moppin that if he could conveniently help me I would like to have assistance in searching for the mails. I don't think I said before the Grand Jury that the short man was five feet eight inches high. I noticed the scar; it may have been a burn or a sore, but it was healed entirely well. On the trip up before the robbery, I met Tompkins on Muddy a mile from the station. He was alone. George Martin was with me. I had conversation of a few minutes with Tompkins. I have taken considerable interest in trying to find out whether these parties were innocent or guilty. I never said to Dan French and John Storrs at the Dalles that I could swear Tompkins clear. Probably after giving Schutz a description of the men, as I have here in Court, I did say I knew of no mark which would lead to the detection or identification of the robbers. When the guns were presented at the time of the robbery I did not go on because I did not think it was safe. I was as surely afraid of my life. Carrying treasure in the mail may be in competition with the express business, and I may have said so. I don't know but I may have said to Tanhauser of Canyon City that the parties who sent treasure by mail ought to ship it by some other way, but I did not say to him that "it was good enough for them if they did get robbed." I met Williams about six miles this side of Ward's, but don't recollect on what day of the month. I had a conversation with him. It was short. He served a subpœna on me. I may have told him I was sorry I couldn't go back with him. I don't think I said I would try and get a horse and come back. I do not recollect of saying to him that Mr Moreland was up and would like to see him. We were close to the stage. The conversation was not private, and the people on the stage could have heard us. I have taken no particular interest in getting witnesses for the prosecution. I have taken no more interest in getting testimony for the defendants than I have for the prosecution. I have never sent any letter or message to Tompkins in relation to this matter.

Direct examination resumed.—As we came by Moppin's on the evening of the robbery I saw only two women. From the top of the hill at the head of the canyon to Ward's is about four miles; from the same place to the nearest house on the new road leading towards Antelope Valley is 3 miles. This new road is rough but not steep. I could drive to Ward's quicker with safety. On the trip up before the robbery when I met Tompkins I took up some things for him and left them at Currant Creek Station. Tompkins was going toward the Station where I left the things before I met him. There was nothing said that everybody on the stage could not have heard. I have served no subpœnas in this case. I did not go to the office of the Prosecuting Attorney because I was not invited and because I had heard that my name had been mentioned in connection with the affair and the United States officers seemed disposed to shun me, and I did not wish to make myself officious where I was not wanted.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Court convened at one o'clock P M. Parties present as before.

Isaac Knisely was called by defendants and testified: On the 12th of July I was walking a little behind the stage in Antelope Canyon when the three men came out of the brush, stopped the stage and ordered us all to throw up our hands. I was in the rear of the stage and on the right hand side of the road, a step or two from the wheel, with a little over the length of the stage between me and the robbers. When the men came out they were eight or ten feet apart. The first thing I heard was "Whoa!" then "Throw up your hands." Next, "We'll not hurt you, Edgar," then "throw out the mail sacks." Capt Fearing threw out one sack and the man asked if that was all. Edgar said "No," and threw out the other. The man then passed round to the left of the stage and made some remarks about the other sacks. I would think the first man was 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, rather the plumpest built man of the three. The second man was about 6 foot tall, straight and slender. The third man was about my height, 5 feet 9½ inches, not heavy built, weighing, I should think, about 145 lbs. When the stage stopped Miss Franklin threw her head forward on the seat and remained in that position pretty much all the time until we started on. Mrs Morrison said "My God! we are all murdered" and got off the stage before the mail sacks were thrown out. There was only one man who passed around to the left hand side of the stage. I did not see the hair or eyes of any of the robbers so that I could describe them. They were masked. I saw Tompkins when he passed through John Day City in 1869. I have not sufficient knowledge of the defendants to form an opinion as to whether they were the men at the stage robbery.

L J Edgar testified: I was at Camp Watson on the morning of July 13th about 60 miles from the place of the robbery. That morning I took up a strange bay horse; the cold sweat was standing all over him, as if he had been driven hard.

Jesse Warfield testified: I have been stopping at Camp Watson, and was about the 13th and 14th of July. I saw two horses about that time, this side of Camp Watson. They were strange horses there. I am acquainted with the horses there but did not know these. One was a bay and the other a sorrel. I could not say about their having been used; they had the prints of saddles on them.

William Hinkle testified: I was at my place on John Day's, two and a half miles below the mouth of Cherry creek, six or seven miles from Tompkins', on the 11th of July, and Frank Tompkins was there at the time.

J W Cusick.—I live in Wasco county 36 miles from Moppin's in Antelope Valley. Am a stock raiser. I know the defendants. I was present at Grater's when Tompkins was arrested. Was in the house with the party that arrested him when Tompkins came up to the house. The party went out, Attleberry in the lead and Moppin rather behind. Tompkins said "How are you?" They answered him and raising their guns said "Throw up your hands!" Tompkins asked two or three times "What's this for" before they answered. After the handcuffs were on him I think it was Moppin told him it was for robbing the stage. Tompkins said he'd bet 100 head of cattle that any man who said he robbed the stage or had anything to do with it was a liar. Moppin told him he need not deny it; Bramlette had confessed, and Tompkins said he would bet 100 head of cattle that if Bramlette had confessed he was scared, and was a damned liar. Tompkins said I can prove myself innocent, and one of them (Moppin or Attleberry) asked "Who by?" And Tompkins said "Hanson and White." Moppin said they were interested and helped rob the stage and that they were going to arrest them before night. Tompkins then asked "Does Bramlette say my wife knows anything about it?" Moppin said no. Tompkins then said she could testify for Hanson and White, and then they could come in and testify for him. I heard all the conversation at the time of the arrest. I did not hear Tompkins say "Have you got Hanson and White?" I went from Grater's to Tompkins', and got there after Mr Moppin got there. Hanson was under arrest when I got there. I should think the distance from Antelope canyon, by the way of the headwaters of Currant creek to Tompkins', is about 25 miles. I know the horses belonging to Tompkins, saw the white horse called the "May" horse, some would call him an iron gray; he was picketed out. This was on Saturday the 13th, the next day after the robbery. On Sunday, Tompkins was putting a shoe on this horse. I don't think he had the appearance of being used hard. I know the two bay mares of Tompkin's. They are of a fair size. Hanson was working one of them that day. She did not appear to have been ridden or worked down. On that same day I saw Hanson coming in with a load of logs on a wagon drawn by six horses. From that Saturday evening till the next Friday when he was arrested, I was with Mr Tompkins most all the time engaged in hunting cattle. We were at Coleman's and Vesey's ranches. We generally staid at Vesey's at night. I was looking for my cattle and Tompkins for his. I have been at Tompkin's five or six times within the last six months and never saw a shotgun there; have seen a Henry rifle and a breech loader. During the time we were hunting cattle, there was only one load in his pistol.

Mrs Salome Cusick testified: I was at Mr Tompkins during the week from July 14th till July 20th and was through the house; saw a Henry rifle and another rifle of some sort.

J M Craten testified: Tompkins was arrested at my house. I was present. Bramlette was at my house on the Saturday after the robbery between three and four o'clock. The first thing that was said by the party that arrested Tompkins, was by Mr Attleberry, who told Tompkins to throw up his hands. Tompkins asked, "What does this mean?" but was not answered then. After the irons were on him he said again "Now tell me what this is for." Moppin said "You know damned well." Tompkins said "I don't." Moppin said, "for robbing the U S mail. It is no use to deny it; you'd as well come out and make a full confession." I was not more than four or five feet from Tompkins when he was ironed. [Cross examination of this witness developed no new facts of material weight.]

John West testified to seeing the Bramlette horse at Tompkins about a week after the robbery, in a thin condition.

W H Gates testified: Have known the defendant Tompkins for eighteen or twenty years, and know his stock; have seen the cattle but not horses of defendant on the divide between Trout and Cherry Creeks.

The defense rested and the Court took a recess until 7 P M.

EVENING SESSION.

Court convened at 7 o'clock. F S Schutz was called in rebuttal by the prosecution and testified: I had a conversation with Edgar at the Dalles July 13 in regard to the robbery. He told me that he saw no marks about the robbers that would lead to the detection or identification.

H Moppin and T M Ward were also called in rebuttal of the testimony of Mr Edgar as to his asking assistance of Mr Moppin on the night succeeding the robbery. They each testified that Mr Edgar did not ask for any assistance.

This closed the testimony, and the Court adjourned until 9 o'clock A M Saturday, when the closing arguments to the jury will be made.

Immediately on the convening of the Court this morning the argument of counsel will commence. On the part of the United States the opening speech will be made by B F Dowell, followed by J C Moreland on the part of the defense. In the afternoon John F Caples will address the jury in behalf of the prisoners and will be followed by U S District Attorney Gibbs on the part of the prosecution, which will conclude the argument on both sides. The Court allotted six hours to the counsel—three on each side—for the speeches. At the conclusion of the argument the charge will be given to the jury by the Court and the important case will be submitted to them for their verdict.

A few evenings since at bridge No 1 near the city limits a fire was kindled under the bridge, but it went out and did no further damage. From these two attempts to commit arson, as well as the effort to fire a house on Third street on Wednesday night, it would appear that there is evidently a number of incendiaries now at large in our midst.

A Disease With a Thousand Symptoms.
Dyspepsia is the most perplexing of all human ailments. Its symptoms are almost infinite in their variety, and the forlorn and despondent victims of the disease often fancy themselves the prey in turn of every known malady. This is due in part to the close sympathy which exists between the stomach and the brain, and in part also to the fact that any disturbance of the digestive function necessarily disorders the liver, the bowels and the nervous system, and affects to some extent the quality of the blood. A medicine that like Hostetter's Bitters, not only tones the stomach but at the same time controls the liver, produces a regular habit of the body, braces the nerves, purifies the fluids, and ministers to a mind diseased, is therefore the true and only specific for chronic indigestion. Such is the operation of this famous vegetable restorative. It not only cures dyspepsia but also all concomitant complaints. Moreover it is invaluable as a preventive of indigestion. No one who chooses to take a wineglassful of this agreeable appetizer and stomachic habitually three times a day will ever be troubled with oppression after eating, nausea, sour eructation or any other indication of a want of vigor in the digestive and assimilating organs. The debility and languor [illegible] and permanently relieved by the Bitters, and persons who are constitutionally inclined to look upon life as through a glass darkly will be apt to take a brighter and more hopeful view of the situation under the genial influence of this wholesome medicinal stimulant.

JACK MAYNARD'S CALL. — A COLLEGE STORY.

BY THEODORE M. OSBORNE.

[From the Old and New Magazine.]

It was very quiet that afternoon in the college yard. In all the straight-cut paths that connected every door with every other, there was no one stirring. The wind had died away; and the only sound was the echo of passing sleighbells, lulled by the snow, that lay heavy on roof and branches. In Jack Maynard's room, nothing was moving by the fire. In the wide, old-fashioned grate, the the ruddy flame of a huge piece of cannel leaped and quivered, now gleaming on the long oar over the windows, now throwing out a pictured face in tremulous life from the darkening wall, or lighting up the Venus of Milo in the corner with a half-rosy flush. It played on books, thrown loosely about the big study-table; it sent rays into the high book-case, that glimmered back from polished bindings, and from the silver cup that Jack had won in the class-races. it made the chandelier glow as if it were full of little jets of flame; it sent rosy sparkles among the cluster of German-favors that lined the frame of the picture of the Harvard crew, and spent all its power in vain trying to banish the shadow of the heavy curtains.

Jack himself, a Saxon six-footer, was lying before the grate, with his chin between his hands, and his elbows on the arm of the lounge, pensively tapping the other end of that much-enduring piece of furniture with the toes of his top-boots. Through the fragrant vapor that curled lazily about his head from a long stemmed pipe, he was looking out into the yard, where the twilight was fast deepening among the gnarled elm branches, and lights were already beginning to shine over the snow. He was not taking much notice of the landscape, for his face had a far-off expression; and he made no movement till his pipe went out, when he skillfully dropped it on the floor, without taking the trouble to move his hands from his head, and spoke:

"Robert, my child, are you awake?"

"Just what I was going to ask you," said the child, in a sleepy bass voice, from the depths of the easy chair. Why "child," nobody knew but Jack. Certainly neither of the chums was a child in stature, or in any sense except in the sight of the law. But Jack, who objected to sentimentality between men, was fond of using fatherly terms, as being a sort of combination of absurdity and affection, that could hardly be found fault with from either point of view.

"I was thinking, Bob, how many hearts had been broken under those old elms in all the y s since the college was founded. Just think of the average damage every class day! Do you remember that effusion of Holmes's?—something about—

'Many a classic beach is strewn
With heart-shaped pebbles of blood-red stone.'

Though I don't exactly see where the beach comes in."

"Probably refers to Harvard during the glacial period," suggested Bob.

"And I was wondering," Jack went on, "how many of all the engagements made in college have lasted. I suppose What's-his-name's calculating machine would give the figures easily. 'Twould be a good thing for a fellow to know, so that he could calculate his chances on mathematical principles."

"Jack," said Bob, rising and looming solemnly between him and the window, "are you smashed?"

"My child," said Jack meekly, "I fear I am."

"Dark or light?" said Bob sternly.

"Dark," was the answer, with a powerful sigh.

"Where!" said Bob, after a sad silence.

"That last assembly. I was slightly hammered on that occasion; and last evening I madly proceeded to put myself under a pile-driver, by calling on her. We talked about philosophy and cooking and music and art and women's dress, and—religion."

"Fatal symptom, that last," said Bob.

"I know it," groaned Jack.

His feelings were so strong, that his boots, inspired by his passion, tapped off one of the legs of the lounge, and let him down on the floor, where he lay in a state of dejection, pitiful to behold, until the six o'clock bell rung.

"Going to supper," said Bob, "or is your appetite defunct?"

"My child," was the feeble reply, "where there's food there's hope."

Going to supper he kept musing aloud, "Ethel Hastings! Entrancing name! She tarries at the De Vries'. Said she was going to visit some other friends in Cambridge. Knows some people in my place. What if she should be there next summer?"

And he clasped his big fur glove in an ecstacy, and struck an attitude.

With this thought his spirits improved rapidly, so that when he entered that Spartan club house called Commons he was quite radiant. He beamed upon the somewhat time-worn houri that waited on his table, and addressed her in knightly terms.

"What, ho! thou jewel of me heart! bring hither the wheaten refreshment, and crown me a goblet of bovine nectar."

The good-natured girl grinned, as if she were used to it, and complied with the courteous request. But Jack was too high to eat much. He handed every thing within his reach to his absent minded neighbor, Brown, to watch his puzzled look, and finally succeeded in exchanging Brown's plate for a plate of crackers, without attracting his attention, and then accused him solemnly of selfish gluttony. He recited off-hand the first chapter of his new sensation novel, to be entitled, "The Bloody Fork; or, The Madman's Midnight Meal," wherein the pirate captain (who, he remarked, wasn't essential to the plot, but required by the rules of art) said, "Oho, my diamond-hilted spy-glass!" no less than seven times; and all the principal characters were poisoned at the outset, "to give full swing to the tragic," as he said. "Nothing like appealing the mucker element when you write," he said. "What does the mucker element delight in? Billood!"

He set the table in such a roar, that the steward had to stop him, and advise him to retire; which he did side-wise, with covered face and uncertain step, after the style of the rejected lover in comedy.

After supper a crowd of fellows went round to Jack's room, as usual. But to night he refused to try his hand at chess, and even dropped a challenge to be "cleaned out" in the most rapid and mysterious of games, California Jack, and went to reading intently. One of the others looked over his shoulder, and read aloud:—

"'Many an evening by the waters did we watch the stately ships.

"Beautiful!" murmured Jack.

There was a general laugh as the reader said, "Bad symptom, to appreciate that."

"Well," said Jack, "it's a safe thing to read, any way. The hero behaves in a sensible manner. He knows that one love lost doesn't prevent his trying again, and that he may yet have a chance to pass down that neat little property which he calls Allthsages to the next heir. I detest those French writers who make their disappointed lovers stand in the sea till the tide comes over them. If I couldn't get up a more rational hero than that, I'd never write a novel. Why, it's all imagination, any way. When a fellow finds that all is over, and he must part, and he'll be a rover, to the serious detriment of his heart, and all that, you don't suppose that there isn't somebody else that would do just as well for him, if not better? It doesn't injure anything vital in him, as it does when you shoot him. A man may die of imagination, if you can make him believe that he's sick. Just so a man may suffer mentally from a diseased imagination: and he never sees till afterwards how foolish that imagination is. The practical English novels, in which everybody behaves exactly like very ordinary persons in real life, are better; though, to be sure, some of them grind along rather slowly."

"The trouble isn't so much that the novel-mill grinds slowly, as that it grinds exceeding small," said Bob. "But don't you see that you reduce all our affections and griefs to one dead level of empty imagination?"

"Just so," said Jack. "There isn't anything real about it; and almost everybody sees it so, once or twice in his life, and then tries to forget it."

"If you're going into the Diogenes line," said one of the visitors, "I've got a tub I'd like to sell you. The bottom isn't sound, but the sides are strong; and that's all you want for a roof. You could keep it tight by taking a bath in it occasionally. By the way, if the old Athenian had used his tub for that purpose occasionally, perhaps he wouldn't have been a misanthrope. I think a philosopher in a tub, in some good position, say the corner between Harvard and Hollis, would be an interesting feature of the yard. Think how delightful to have the ladies put up their glasses, and say, 'Was the dear disgusting old fellow once a student here? How interesting! Do tell us all about him!'"

"I shall certainly have to get a new tub," said Jack, entering heartily into the project. "I never could live in my tin hat tub. Just think how the little muckers would make it ring with stones! But then I could use that impractical seat to keep my rations in."

The idea seemed to restore him to the height of good humor; and he lay in his customary position, on the crippled lounge, gently kicking with his top-boots as before, when a loud knock was followed by the entrance of a youth got up in gorgeous style.

"Well, Charley, what's up?" said Bob,

"Been to make my party call on old Smooth," said Charley; "and he's out. I thought I'd drop in and tell you that now's your time to call."

Two or three of the visitors rose hastily, and were about leaving.

"My children," said Jack, in a grieved voice, "is this the way that you heed your instructions about economy of labor? I feel pained to think of such a waste of force. There's no need of but one's going. He can take all the cards, and walk up and down past the house, and leave them all, one after another."

"But the servant will notice it," objected somebody.

"The servant thinks all the students are just alike, and it's easy enough to change your voice, so as not to be recognized. If none of you want to go, by Jove, I'll go myself!"

"But you didn't go to the reception, and don't even know the professor," said Bob.

"The professor isn't in," said Jack, putting on his overcoat. "Now, you fellows, write your cards, if you haven't any with you, and I'll take them."

"Why, Jack: you haven't got any collar on; and those top-boots!"

"How many times must I tell you, my child," said Jack patiently; "the professor is not at home?"

So he put on his big overcoat with a cape, and his fur gloves; and Bob settled his beaver on, after giving his hair a parting rumple. He was just starting, when an idea occurred to him.

"Let me take two or three hats, so that I can change them each time."

He stuck them under his cape, and went out.

The moon was shining brightly as he crossed the yard. It had just risen, and shone through the Gothic windows of the library, lighting them up so that they glimmered faintly across the snow, as if the high hall were filled with the halo of the genius that it enshrined. The old elms stood up motionless against the sky, and the light reflected from the snow-covered roofs flashed through their branches. The snow crackled under his feet; and the clear, cold air sent a thrill of life through him as he walked rapidly away from the square towards the professor's house. Now and then the sound of bells would come out of the distance, growing louder, till the sleigh flashed into the light, and away again, out of sight and hearing. He half forgot the object of his walk, and his mind was full of many wandering thoughts. He thought of meeting the charming girl with whom he had just become acquainted, in his own village in the coming summer. He thought how happy he should be if she would favor him, and let him devote his life to her. He thought how pleasant if she were riding with him now in one of those sleighs, to watch the everchanging forms of the clouds, as the moon lighted them up. He almost thought he saw her image beckoning to him from a radiant cloud; then he thought of the warm climes that the moon was even then shining on, and of the bliss of wandering with her in some isle of changeless summer. It came over him how much time he had wasted idly that he might have improved, if he had had such an object before him; and mighty resolutions arose within him.

These reflections brought him to the house; and laughing to himself to think that he would some time tell her about this absurd prank, he turned in at the gate.

The house was dark; but, after a few vigorous charges at the bell, the servant finally unlocked the door, and answered his inquiry with the news that the professor was not at home.

Jack politely tendered his first card, and walked away. He walked till he reached a favorable corner, when he took off his beaver, and changed it for a cap, and sauntered slowly towards the house again.

Again the servant reported, "Not at home," and another card was left. He walked back to his base of supplies, left off his cape, and changed his hat again.

Another card was successfully deposited.

Flushed with success, he made ready to leave the fourth and last card. He put on his cape and beaver, gathered up the hats, and rang again.

All was silent.

Another ringing peal.

A step was heard far inside the house. It came nearer and nearer, and finally the door was unbolted. Jack was about to ask the same question as before, when he saw that the professor himself was before him. He had just presence of mind enough to say, "Good evening."

"Good evening, Mr. ——," said the professor, not recognizing one of his own immediate pupils.

"Maynard" said Jack gaspingly, remembering his collarless condition.

"Ah! Mr. Maynard, I am glad to see you: my niece and I have just returned from the concert, and you will pardon my rumpled appearance."

Jack stepped in the entry. The professor looked a little astonished at the fur gloves on such an occasion, but said nothing, and led the way to the parlor. A young lady was standing with her back towards them, as they entered.

"My niece, Miss Hastings, Mr. Maynard," said the professor.

She looked at him wonderingly, as he stood there, top-boots, cape, fur gloves, and all, with a very pale face and very rumpled hair.

The conversation which followed must have been a striking one. Jack's ideas could only be kept together by the most intense effort, and he constantly contradicted himself, and confused them, mixing all the topics of conversation in one unfathomable muddle. He tried to give a reason for coming on that special occasion, and made a weak failure. The embarrassment grew more and more intense on both sides, till the professor pitying him for what he supposed was his bashfulness, and seeing how uncomfortable he looked, said,—

"Mr. Maynard, that cape must be very warm. Do take it off."

In his embarrassment, he touched the upper button, and it gave way, revealing the collarless void below. At the same instant the hats, which were only held up by the pressure of the cape, fell on the floor.

How he got out of that parlor he could never clearly tell. But somehow or other, he did, and walked slowly toward home. The moonlight looked very differently to him now. The shifting clouds became troops of laughing goblins. He thought of the cold moonlight falling on the ice in the far north, and wished that he were buried a mile deep in those lifeless regions. He thought it wasn't so strange, after all, that Victor Hugo should have made his hero wait the rising tide, and wondered if he could find a suitable place in the Charles, whereon to sit and await a like happy oblivion.

Reaching his room, the fellows were all eager to hear his story.

"Did you leave the cards?"

"All but one; and here it is."

He felt in his pocket, and looked blank. It had fallen with the cape on that parlor floor, and he had left it there.

Word by word they got the whole story out of him. They laughed till they could laugh no more; they rolled about the floor in ecstacies of mirth; but he sat silent and motionless. At last they saw how deeply it had cut him, and left him.

To no very happy reflections. To be sure, he had broken no law; but the pretty element of the business kept annoying him more and more. How could he ever hold up his head in Cambridge after this?

He sat late into the night. Bob left him sitting there, silent and motionless, looking as if he had seen the Gorgon's head.

The next morning Bob called out,"

"Jack!"

"Yes."

"I hope it doesn't trouble you. It's all imagination, you know."

"My child, never sit on your parent when he's down."

He didn't dare to walk about Cambridge for a fortnight. At the end of that time he ventured out. It was a dull, cheerless afternoon. The trees kept up a slow dripping and the sidewalk was damp and slippery. The leaden sky cast a gloom over all the landscape, that accorded well with his mood. He was thinking that he was always getting into scrapes that injured him, that he was a useless member of society, that his life would always be dull and ordinary, and that he might as well stop trying to make any thing of himself, when he turned the corner and came full on Miss Hastings.

He didn't expect her to recognize him, and was resolved to pass her without noticing the out, but she stopped and spoke to him.

"Is this yours?" said she, handing him the card he had dropped.

"It is," he said, and flashed at the cruelty. He was hurrying on, but she stopped him again.

"He didn't see it. I picked it up and kept it. I saw through the whole thing. I never pitied any one so much in my life. You must have felt awfully. Come and see me at the De Vries'."

He was so overcome at the sudden revulsion that he took her hand and kissed it, right in the street. Nobody noticed it, except a very small girl on the other side, who said "Oh, my!" and crossed over to get a better view of further proceedings.

Of course, he had to apologize for the rudeness, and explain all about it at once. They walked slowly up the street; and just as they reached a little eminence, the leaden sky broke into great rifts before them in the west, and a flood of light glowed on the far off snowy hill, and threw a crimson veil over all the sky.

"How beautiful the view is!" said she.

"Yes said he, looking right in her face. "What a lovely flush the sunset throws on it!"

What else he said is not recorded. But Bob said that when he came in that night "he was so happy that if you had stood him on his head he'd have walked off without knowing it."

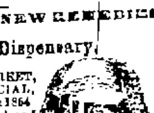
TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,



623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1864 for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system. Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible, life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN,

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in registered letter through the Postoffice or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union.

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary. Some of the self-styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy too work at their trades. Some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you many regrets; for, as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr. Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his offices of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes to cure.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1,957.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian.
